Faculty Positions: Geriatrician Clinician Educators

The Division of Geriatrics, Gerontology, and Palliative Medicine, Department of Medicine, is recruiting outstanding Geriatrician Clinician Educators to lead and build an inter-disciplinary group practice at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio. The UT Health Science Center opened a new Medical Arts and Research Center in 2009 that includes a Center for Healthy Aging to provide primary and consultative care to South Texas elders. Successful applicants will have key roles in this practice. In addition to providing excellent care, applicants should have skills and interests in teaching medical students, residents, and fellows and/or participating in clinical research. The Division is fully integrated with UT Health Science Center resources, including the Barshop Institute for Longevity and Aging Studies, the South Texas Veterans Health Care System (Geriatrics Research Education and Clinical Center, Geriatrics and Extended Care Programs), Hartford Center for Excellence in Geriatrics, and Fellowship Programs in Geriatrics and Hospice and Palliative Medicine. Applicants must be Board Certified in Internal Medicine and already have or be eligible for the Certificate of Added Qualifications (CAQ) in Geriatrics. Successful applicants will be appointed at the rank of Assistant or Associate Professor dependent on experience.

The core values of the UT Health Science Center Department of Medicine include commitments to excellence, professionalism and maturity, collegiality, intellectual curiosity, support for creating new knowledge, and participation in a community of scholars. Geriatricians who share these values are welcome to send letters of interest and their Curriculum Vitae to:
